

UPDATE:

Corey Haim's mom says Charlie Sheen not the one who sexually abused her son

Dewatering Equipment

Sludge Dewatering and Belt Press Rental. aspen-rentals.com

Waiting for snowflakes at Colorado ski resorts

TRAVEL

By Anne Z. Cooke - Tribune News Service

STEVE HAGGERTY/COLORWORLD/TNS

Skiing down Sneaky's run, with Sam's Knob restaurant in the background. (Steve Haggerty/ColorWorld/TNS)

Posted: 6:00 a.m. Tuesday, October 24, 2017

---

TABERNASH, Colo. — Ready or not, powder hounds, here comes the snow.

On Sept. 29, the first snowfall of the season dusted Colorado ski resorts, dropping just enough white flakes for impatient snowboarders to score a downhill run through the trees. But the storm was just an opener for the main event.

A couple of days later another white-out blew over the Rocky Mountains, leaving a foot of feathery-soft snow on most resorts, from 12 inches at Snowmass, in the Roaring Fork Valley, to 14 inches at Loveland and 18 inches at Steamboat, in the Yampa Valley. And within the week, 3 more inches.

"I was ready to get my skis out, but it didn't last," lamented Sara Reed, in Estes Park.

Though the official ski season doesn't launch until Thanksgiving, when nighttime temperatures are cold enough to make and keep snow, an early winter could mean a long one.

And for recreational skiers — like me — it was a reminder. Time again for the annual online marathon in search of resort news, up-to-date weather

---

Dewatering

Sludge Dewatering and Belt

Press Rental.

forecasts, stay-and-ski family discounts, new bumps clinics and affordable lodging.

Before the internet, pre-season planning was simple. You skied at the same place you skied every year. Now it's a bite-your-fingernails chore guaranteed to turn anyone's hair a lighter shade of grey. With millions of bits of data socked away in dozens of poorly organized resort websites, navigating from one screen to the next is headache fodder.

Just for fun, type "ski resorts" into your favorite search engine. I did and produced a formidable 3,410,000 hits. "Lake Tahoe skiing" scored 60,600 hits, but that included ski lodges and restaurants. Vail Resorts found 472,000 results, including resorts, hotels and real estate investments. That's a lot of choices to winnow to one.

Do you know what you want? That's step one. Trail maps and advanced bumps clinics? Popular kids' stay-and-ski-free programs? Or maybe you'd like to earn some points at an independently owned and managed ski mountain, one of those much-loved outliers known for its special ambiance and home-grown culture?

When I started looking, I decided that if a website didn't have a home page that popped up with an easy-to-read, color-saturated photo of skiers schussing down snowy mountain trails, it was probably doomed. Visuals count. And if it didn't include an in-your-face list of sub-topics, I stopped looking.

Then I took the easy way out. I started with last season's two best favorites, Snowmass Ski Resort, in Colorado, and Park City Resort, in Utah, just to see what's new. Faster chairlifts, redesign of the trail system, new top-of-the-peak restaurants, that kind of thing.

Snowmass, (www.aspensnowmass.com), one of the Aspen Ski Company's four resorts, next door to each other, is big and broad, a fresh-air destination at any time of year. The runs here, rated for all skill levels, fan down from four high peaks: black diamond widow-makers plunging down vertical steepes, gentle beginners' green trails, and miles of swooping intermediate blue runs.

The on-slope restaurants are as good as anything you'll find anywhere, and ski-in ski-out lodging tucked into the trees is a feature, one I'm too spoiled to give up. When I first started to ski, in Southern California, the parking lot was 500 feet from the snow, walking in stiff, plastic boots and humping skis, poles and a day pack. That was then. Nowadays I want to step out the door and glide away.

As for the Aspen-Snowmass website, it didn't disappoint either. A single site with four divisions, the graphics were inviting and easy to follow, with story-telling photos, charts, maps, lists of lessons, kids' ski school signups, apres-ski events, other winter activities and daily and weekly rates. Once you'd navigated through Snowmass, the others were easy.

My other resort favorite, Park City Resorts, in Utah

(www.parkcitymountain.com), is an authentic destination on two fronts. It's not just a big, newly renovated family-friendly ski mountain but a historic base area village, a restored mining town with great restaurants and hip shops. But Park City, now merged with the Canyon, is a Vail property, one of 17 ski resorts owned or managed by the real estate investment giant, Vail Resorts.

The result is a single website (www.vail.com) for all 17 ski areas. This is an advantage for Vail, of course, facilitating resortwide promotions. For skiers there's a handy list of names, a quick click from one to the next. But forcing 17 geographically dispersed, very different ski resorts into a single mold homogenizes — and commercializes — the ski experience.

Some of the best ski areas have created clubs, joining forces to compete. The first is the Mountain Collective (www.mountaincollective.com), whose shadowy green home page charms like velvet. An association of independent ski areas, the Collective is a club of 16 charismatic, unique and sometimes wild and woolly resorts dedicated to promote unforgettable adventures.

Some of the members you'll know — Aspen-Snowmass and Squaw Valley/Alpine Meadows, in California's Sierra Nevadas. Others you may not, including Coronet Peak, in New Zealand, and Revelstoke, in Canada, known for the continent's longest vertical drop: a wowie 5,620 feet.

Gas up the station wagon (or the Ferrari), buy the Collective's 33 ski-day adult pass, for $489, and the 12-and-under youth pass for $99, and you and your 11-year-old can ski two days each at six of the 16 — say, Sugar Bush, Taos Ski Valley, Mammoth Mountain, Sun Valley, Jackson Hole and Banff Sunshine — and still have 21 ski days left.

The other essential website is Colorado Ski Country (www.coloradoski.com), a bright and eye-catching site representing Colorado's 21 large and small ski and snowboard resorts. As a hub, Colorado Ski posts each site's latest news, weather reports and special offers, along with photos, a slide show and general information.

From there, links to each individual site lead to the nitty gritty. Ever skied at Eldora, or Monarch, Wolf Creek or Powderhorn? Ever taken the kids to Howelsen or Sunlight? Colorado has more skiable mountains than Saturday Night Live has skits.

But without snow, no website helps. With weather patterns changing, snowfall is an increasingly dodgy topic. Depending on long range forecasts, maybe — just maybe — it's better to wait a little longer before booking lodging and lift tickets.

Ski resorts aren't weather forecasters, but do post ski conditions online, with current temperatures, past and recent snow levels, and sometimes even charts showing annual snowfall every month of every year for the past decade. Nonetheless, it's better to consult science.

If you're planning to ski more than two weeks in advance, advises former Olympic snowboarder Erica Mueller, at Crested Butte Resort, near Gunnison, Colo., “look for a science-based website, like www.opensnow.com.” Founded by skier Joel Gratz, a Colorado-based meteorologist, the site has been monitoring weather forecasts and future storms for the last six years. “That’s where most of the ski resorts I know go to look ahead,” says Mueller.

Like most skiers, Gratz’s search for the best powder snow began as a hobby. Then it evolved into a full-time occupation.

“What separates us from other sites is that we know what powder skiers like,” says Gratz. “So we focus on which resorts are likely to get the next powder storm.” After a year of testing, the site went online in November 2011, and so far, it’s a success.”

For more information on all things ski, from weather forecasts to package deals and late-season discounts, I go to www.onthesnow.com. When it comes to planning the best ski vacation ever, you can never know enough.

---

(Writer Anne Z. Cooke plans to ski the top indefinitely. Contact her at travelswithanne@cs.com; on Twitter at #anneontheroad; and on Facebook.)

---

---

Reader Comments 0 ▲

---

---

Next Up in Travel

---

From whiskey den to adventure vessel, resurrected tall ship sets sail for points south

by Craig Hill, The News Tribune (Tacoma, Wash.)

TACOMA, Wash. — Jordan Hanssen says he’s doesn’t use the word resurrection lightly, but he can’t think of a better word to describe the story of the tall ship where he’ll spend the next month. The 72-foot topsail schooner named Dirigo II was hidden away for its protection during World War II, it sailed twice around...

---

US tightens travel rules to Cuba, blacklists many businesses

by Josh Lederman, The Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans seeking to visit Cuba must navigate a complicated maze of travel, commerce and financial restrictions unveiled Wednesday by the Trump administration, part of a new policy to further isolate the island’s communist government. Now off-limits to U.S. citizens are dozens of Cuban hotels, shops, tour companies and...

Plenty of sunshine for Caribbean travelers

by Elaine Glusac, The New York Times

Hurricanes Irma and Maria devastated many islands in the Caribbean region, including Puerto Rico, the British and U.S. Virgin Islands, Dominica and St. Martin. They also battered Anguilla, St. Barts, the Turks and Caicos and others. But many islands, including Aruba, Bonaire and Curaçao in the southern Caribbean, and the central Cayman...

TripAdvisor, under fire for removing claims of rape, will now flag hotels with reported incidents

by Marwa Eltagouri, Rachel Siegel, The Washington Post

In response to widespread criticism for removing claims of sexual assault from its forums to keep them "family friendly," TripAdvisor has started placing warning symbols - or "badges" - on the review pages of hotels and businesses where rape and other safety incidents have been reported. The travel and restaurant review website...

---

'Primal Survivor' host brings home insights on indigenous ways around the globe

by Rich Landers, The Spokesman Review (Spokane, Wash.)

SPOKANE, Wash. — Most people will need a few Google searches to peg where Hazen Audel has survived the elements in 2017. But while Namibia and Siberut are off the beaten path, the host of "Primal Survivor" is home in Spokane now, recuperating after filming his third season of the series that puts him into uncomfortable situations...

More Stories

NEWS ▶

CUSTOMER SERVICE ▶

MARKETPLACE ▶

SOCIAL MEDIA ▶

TOP ▲

© 2017 Cox Media Group. By using this website, you accept the terms of our Visitor Agreement and Privacy Policy, and understand your options regarding Ad Choices. Learn about careers at Cox Media Group