

Whirling through icebergs on a High Arctic cruise

By Anne Z. Cooke, Tribune News Service | December 9, 2015

0

Photo: Steve Haggerty Photography, HO

High arctic winds spin cloud formations into fan shapes at Pond Inlet, Baffin Island, Nunavut, Canada.

ILULISSAT, Greenland - "Shuussh!" said Capt. Oliver Kreuss, standing on the bridge of the Lindblad Expedition-National Geographic ship Explorer, training his binoculars on the iceberg-choked fiord ahead. "I can't talk now," he barked, cutting the speed to 6 knots and steering the vessel left and right around each floating titan like a dancer whirling his partner across the floor.

SIGN-IN

Forgot Your Password?

To continue reading this story, you will need to be a digital subscriber to HoustonChronicle.com.

Houston Chronicle subscribers have FREE access to all premium digital products.

By logging in, you agree to the Terms and Conditions and Privacy Policy.

Get your All Digital Pass to Houston insider news and analysis

SUBSCRIBE >

HOUSTON★CHRONICLE

Return to Top ↑

About

Our Company

Ad Choices

Careers

Terms of Use

Advertising

Privacy Policy

Your Privacy Rights

Your California Privacy Rights

Contact

Archives

Customer Service

Frequently Asked Questions

Newsroom Contacts

Connect

HEARST newspapers

© 2013 Hearst Newspapers, LLC.